One Hundred Faces Jason Ryan Quackenbush

Teenage prodigies can be found all over the world in all shapes and sizes. Max Rivers, an introverted Maine resident afflicted by the toils of ADD, just happens to be one of them. Max lives a monotonous life; that is, until things start changing. A series of random events leads him to a strange, but generous man who provides Max with an artifact that promises to change his life drastically, and it does just that. Follow Max through this unique blend of realistic fiction and fantasy as he recounts his struggles with the absence of his father, an ignorant mother, the anxiety of living with a serious mental disorder, and an extreme lie that only serves to cause more problems.
