Isabella Jaramillo is accustomed to getting what she wants. A privileged socialite, Isabella has spent her 27 years with wealth and status, thanks to her father's ownership of the country's sole time travel corporation. Everything in her life—her friends, her lovers, even her marriage—has been solely on her terms. Living such a charmed life, it is easy for her to be thoughtless—so blissfully unaware of the secrets in her own home, the secrets that may get her killed. In a bitter act of revenge, Isabella's planned time travel to 1921 Brussels is sabotaged, propelling her into the distant past. Alone in a cold and desolate world, Isabella is confronted by men on horseback—Dark Ages Europeans speaking a language she does not understand. Captured, brutalized, and facing worse than death, reality crashes down on her, and Isabella Jaramillo—the social queen of Miami—finds herself a slave. Taken as property, Isabella makes some surprising allies and discovers the truth behind her father's rise to power and the terrible price the entire world paid for it. She must somehow break free and find a way home, not only to save herself, but to restore history to its rightful direction.
